The subject report shows the publishing strength of a number of key institutions across a range of subject areas, with a focus on several growth & development areas for Emerald.

The report shows those institutions which feature in the top 500 for volume of articles and other papers published (by all publishers with journals indexed by Thomson Reuters via Web of Science) for that particular subject. This basically indexes all key output for academic and other research based institutions.

A five star rating is used to rank each institution in terms of the volume of research output:

5 stars = placed in the top 100 in the world

4 stars = placed 101 - 200

3 stars = placed 201 - 300

2 stars = placed 301 - 400

1 star = placed 401 - 500

It's a quick visual reference system to indicate where an institution is positioned in terms of both its subject interest and world rankings.

Interpretation of this, with other information, such as current subscription and usage patterns, can help identify sales and publishing opportunities by showing any gaps for the subjects where the institution has the highest amount of output.

The "Available" column shows what content (number of journals) we have available for this subject community. This content is typically drawn from more than one of our taxonomies. The "Subscription" column shows what database content is currently subscribed to. The "Difference" is simply what content is of potential relevance, which does not fall into the subscription. This can indicate up-sell potential
